STATEMENT

Don Bennett is a businessman concerned with the fiscal future of our State. He feels that 25% of all money collected from Alaska's non-renewable resources should be placed in a permanent fund. Interest from the sound investment of fund money should be used to further the development of both non-renewable and renewable resources, thus creating year-round jobs for our residents. The remaining 75% of the money should be used by the State to "pay as we go" as an alternative to bonding and deficit spending. Through this method, property taxes and state income can be further reduced or eliminated.

He advocates a sound, intelligent approach to Alaska development. "Development is a natural process; however, we must insure orderly development. Without that, Alaska could be either a junk yard or a wasteland".

Only through a healthy economy can all of our citizens receive quality education, a comfortable lifestyle, and the assurance of security and dignity for our senior citizens.

It was a privilege to represent Fairbanks, North Pole, Salcha, Fox and Central in the last legislature, and I hope I am able to serve once again.

STATEMENT

Land — The State should initiate a land disposal program which would move large acreages from public to private ownership. This should be done without bureaucratic delay.

Non-renewable Resources — With emphasis now on renewable resources, we must not forget that our state's great wealth comes from non-renewables. We should continue to aggressively develop our oil and gas resources. And, most importantly, we should pursue Alaska's great potential in hard-rock mining.

Energy — Now more than ever, we must build a large-scale hydroelectric project on the Susitna River to serve growing energy demands in the railbelt from Fairbanks south. This project should be constructed, owned and operated by Alaskans.

Haul Road — It's preposterous to spend taxpayer dollars to maintain the North Slope Haul Road for a select group of private users. The road should be opened to the public.

Crime — We're gaining ground, but much remains to be done to toughen-up sentencing. Those who commit crimes against people and property should be punished.

Growth versus No-Growth — This continues to be the fundamental debate in Alaska. We must resolve it among ourselves, without high-handed interference from the federal government. Balanced growth is possible.

STATEMENT

Alaska is a great state on the threshold of taking its proper place in the world. My role as a State Senator must be to assure that this challenge is met. Juneau has the capital, Anchorage has the population and Fairbanks has the highest unemployment in Alaska. The Haul Road issue is still undecided, the gas line is going through Canada and the university is in trouble.

It doesn't have to be this way. We need a voice in the State Senate who can speak up for the Interior and be heard.

We must:

- Provide effective marketing and budget analyses, business counseling and lower interest rates for small businesses.

- Determine needed areas of expertise and provide training programs to meet the needs.
- Develop alternative energy sources.
- Foster planned agricultural, strategic mineral, and petrochemical development.
- Promote public versus state land ownership.
- Encourage development of the Interior as the hub of transportation.
- Prioritize the role of state government.
- Demand stringent accountability in budgeting.
- Either enforce or eliminate present state statutes.
- Provide low-interest financing for housing.

STATEMENT

My concerns in the legislature are: tax reform; law enforcement; careful development of resources; decentralization of government. I believe experience, persistence, effectiveness in business, city government, two State House terms and one State Senate term have qualified me to effectively represent you in the Senate.

Every citizen, his family and property must be protected from criminal activity, confiscatory taxation and too much government. Land to live on and develop must be made available to Alaskans.

Extraction, transportation and processing of resources must provide maximum revenue and jobs. Careful legislation can insure that Alaskan quality of life will be protected, as well as assuring that Alaskans will be available, employable and employed on Alaskan jobs. Revenues from depletable resources must be wisely invested for the greatest good for this and future generations.

To the maximum extent possible, our government should be by laws passed by our legislature and not regulations adopted by bureaucrats. A truly representative government requires that the ideas of the people be considered in deciding issues and choosing issues to be decided. I pledge to fight to achieve these ends by honorable and fair means during the next four years as I have during the past eight.

STATEMENT

Our people are asking for jobs and job training, especially in vocational areas. Nearly all good jobs now go to outsiders. Local people could do much of this work, if they had the training. Just having a job solves many social problems, such as alcoholism and family break up.

The people whose traditional lifestyle depends on hunting and fishing must be given priority in subsistence regulation. State and federal authorities must recognize this and work together with the people to develop fair regulation. Subsistence rights must not be abused, so that there will be sufficient wildlife for our children.

Our educational institutions are producing far too many dropouts because educators are not paying enough attention to the real and practical needs of the people. Many young people feel they are wasting time in school and sometimes they are right. Both teachers and students would do better work if there were less politics and tradition in education.

Most important, the people want competence and integrity in their political leaders. They deserve honest, hard-working leaders who will listen. If elected, I will be that kind of leader.

STATEMENT

During the next legislature, there are several items especially important to the people of District 18.

TRAINING AND JOBS — I will work for Alaskan hire and for training programs to qualify Alaskans for jobs.

SUBSISTENCE — The right of Alaska's native people to guarantees of subsistence hunting and fishing must be protected. I will work to help ensure that those rights are protected by law.

HATCHERIES — Alaska's fishing stocks must be restored through sensible management and programs of hatcheries and stream rehabilitation. This is a first responsibility in managing our renewable resources.

PUBLIC FACILITIES — Alaska's rural communities must have more, better and safer airports. Water and sewer systems are needed in all villages.

PUBLIC HEALTH — I will work on rural public health programs as much remains to be done.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS — Remote communications for education, entertainment, information, business and safety reasons must be increased. As a member of the Committee on Telecommunications, I have worked in that direction and will continue to do so.

MILITARY SERVICE:

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL POSITION(S):

Commercial pilot for various air taxi operators along the Kuskokwim River for the last eight years

SPECIAL INTERESTS:

I have lived in the bush west of the Alaska range for the last eight years and I wouldn't live anywhere else that I know of. In 1973 I filed on a homestead on the Holitna River and I have enjoyed making the necessary improvements on it to qualify.

I also enjoy flying around Alaska meeting the fine people that make up the bush communities. I have over 7,000 flying hours in western Alaska and have met and talked to hundreds of people. I have enjoyed it.

STATEMENT

The change that is taking place in the bush communities is gathering momentum. It seems to be affecting the younger generation more acutely and leaving some of the older people somewhat bewildered. Young people should be made qualified and available for job opportunities. I am concerned that the bush is not getting its fair share of the job market. With the gas pipeline coming, I feel that Alaskans living in the bush should have better hiring conditions than on the last pipeline.

I feel that Alaska's game is in great peril. If something isn't done pretty soon, the game on this side of the Alaska range will go the same as it has on the other side.

We should think of the local areas having access first and the non-local people second. As a person who lives in the woods, hunting, trapping and fishing are some of my main concerns.

The transportation of freight is one of the main issues that needs something done. Especially since the Wien strike.

I think responsiveness to the voters and talking to them directly is a main issue and I intend to do just that.

SPECIAL INTEREST(S):

Out of all my interests, the one that I enjoy working with the most revolves around agriculture and livestock. Working with the Alaskan soil and climate is a big challenge. With experimentation of various methods of growing a variety of crops, I have found that agriculture in the Interior can be feasible, while making it possible to feed livestock that has been developed for Alaska's harsh climate.

STATEMENT

A very important issue that has become a reality in the last few years and will become more of a reality for District 19 is the organized borough proposals. I would like to say that I am opposed to any form of a forced borough and will not endorse any borough action that does not represent the will of a majority of those affected. I say this in knowing that, with an ever growing and progressing society, a minimal form of local government and financial base will eventually be needed.

On the haul road issue, I personally feel that since it will be maintained with the taxpayers' money, use of it should not be denied to those who pay for it. But I will endorse hunting and off-road travel restrictions.

Another issue that is very important to the Interior is the capital move. It is only right that the capital be accessible to the majority of the people.

It is my opinion that d-2 and the BLM Organic Land Act are violations of our state's rights and will stand with that opinion in Juneau.

I will also oppose any form of gun restriction.

Fish and Game — The fish and game resources of our State belong to everyone and no special group should be provided priority use. Management should always be for maximum utilization with first consideration to the resource itself.

STATEMENT

Alaska is today on the threshold of potential greatness or disaster. We Alaskans — you and I — shall make that decision in the next few years by how we VOTE. We have the resources, both human and natural, to be a great asset to ourselves and the world. We have eight to nine thousand young Alaskans graduating from our high schools and colleges each year. Shall we export our sons and daughters, put them on welfare or give them honest employment? These are the choices in the years ahead. Alaska has the wealth to pursue the welfare state, socialism or whatever we choose to call it down the road to oblivion.

Or we can take the other road, the free enterprise road, the freedom road, the right of the individual road to prosperity and an asset to ourselves, our State and our country. Granted it is easier to take the easy road but I believe voting Alaskans will take the freedom road because "ANY GOVERNMENT THAT CAN GIVE YOU EVERYTHING YOU WANT CAN ALSO TAKE IT ALL AWAY".

STATEMENT

Government must only do for us what we cannot do for ourselves. We need a new attitude in government, one that asks, "Why?" instead of "Why not?" for government has become oppressive in trying to regulate the marketplace and the individual.

Alaska is young and we have yet to find the stride in growth which best suits us. That course will best be charted in Alaska, not in Washington, D.C. Positive action in Juneau can help direct our future.

Action can get us started towards those objectives we must realize. For example, it makes no sense for us to import 95% of the food we consume when we are sitting in the middle of millions of farmable acres of land. That problem is also part of the larger, erroneous attitude of state government which contends that it, the government, should control all our lands. Private ownership is not the ultimate lockup.

These problems and others were addressed during the last election, yet they still linger as uncertainties in our future. As a new state flexing her strengths, we will face many new decisions each day and we cannot afford the luxury of inaction.

STATEMENT

Wise investment of Alaska's Permanent Fund can improve our economy without impairing capital, and further tax breaks combined with cash-supported capital improvements (minimizing borrowing) of needed facilities in high-unemployment parts of Alaska, can help the economy.

But no candidate can promise a voter a job and deliver for certain: voters should distrust such simple, wild claims.

It was tragic that the unemployment bill we passed in the House died in the Senate on adjournment day: the final compromise, much needed, would have adjusted for the inflation since 1973 and corrected abuses by employees and employers, but without a serious tax increase. We need the bill in 1979.

Our new Criminal Code will add needed certainty in sentencing for serious crimes while eliminating unfair and antiquated laws and I'm proud of my involvement with it. But in the year before its effective date, we must carefully search for oversights and avoid problems; it could be our basic law for the next century.

We must be vigilant in telecommunications. Our monopoly long-distance carrier is owned by a New York-based international corporation with little in common with us. Continued activism can improve our satellite telephone and television services.

STATEMENT

Overregulations — Individual freedoms are being overcome by state regulations often promulgated by civil servants who profess to know more about what the public needs than do the people. We should decrease the government in our lives and encourage individual and family responsibility.

Land — We are fast approaching a time when land will be totally controlled by government. It is time for the State to return the land to the people, if not through homesteading, then by accelerating land disposal through other state programs.

Resource Development — Alaska has 14 basins with oil and gas potential, 30 million acres of commercial forests, vast hard-rock mineral deposits, and one-third of the undeveloped hydroelectric sites in the entire nation. Rational development of these resources is necessary if we are to have an economic base other than government.

Haul Road — Opening the North Slope Haul Road to the public would encourage the development that is necessary for Interior Alaska if we are to avoid total dependence on government. But development of our northern resources should be carried out in an orderly manner, protecting the area's wilderness character.

STATEMENT

The reason we all are in Alaska is because we feel that opportunities available are better here. These opportunities may be a job, a home, an education or availability to the outdoors. However, these opportunities can be easily eliminated through government legislation. I believe that the State's primary purpose is to promote and protect these opportunities.

This goal can best be attained by in-state processing of our resources, protection of Alaskan workers and contractors on major development projects and controls on government growth and spending.

Alaska has been sending millions of dollars every year to other areas in the form of processing jobs while the unemployment level is the highest of any state. Contracts for future development of non-renewable resources must protect Alaskans who own those resources and must be enforced. Government spending must be based on "zero-based" budgeting and programs subjected to systematic checks to evaluate their viability. This would also aid in avoiding duplication, check over expenditures and make state agencies more efficient.

People have developed a distrust for government which can only prove harmful to ourselves. The solution is to elect people who really want to improve Alaska and are willing to work hard towards this goal.

STATEMENT

Alaska has been a state for eighteen years, yet what is now happening to our State may be more important than at any previous time. Alaska's greatest challenge is selecting the representatives of the people who will correct governmental wrongs and advance our individual and business freedom.

It is true that a few individuals do make a difference. Let this election be Alaska's essential springboard in governing ourselves. Let the relationship between experience and education in Alaska be the cornerstone of responding to people's needs with skills of doing.

The bulk of our employment comes from small businesses; let's build small business as well as corporations with dollar economy. Create new jobs for workers, not for state bureaucrats!

The knowledge gap in petroleum in this State can be closed by building up expertise at the University that is second to none — unbiased, research-oriented.

A large portion of our Permanent Fund needs to be balanced financial investment in agricultural, mineral and industrial production, including tourism.

Politics is a shared experience and interdependence is strength. Our greatest revolution is the discovery that by changing our minds, we can change the outer aspects of our lives.

STATEMENT

The present d-2 legislation which is, at this time, pending in the US Congress is the greatest reneging action taken by the federal government since it put the lower 48 Indian tribes on reservations. The Alaskan Legislature must do everything possible to mitigate or circumvent its enforcement.

Alaska must be developed both for its own citizens and the jobs they desperately need, as well as for our country and the resources it needs to remain strong and to improve its balance of payments throughout the world.

Welfare to those not in need is a drain that must be stopped in its every facet. This includes unemployment benefits to large annual wage earners who take several months off each year and vacation at the taxpayers' expense or workmen's compensation insurance that promotes fraudulent claims because the insurance pays enough to make not working attractive.

Alaska is and should be the land of opportunity for those willing to work for the benefits it can provide. It should be opened up correctly, not locked up. Now is the time to move ahead with vision and courage. Alaska is not now, nor will it ever be, for the timid.

STATEMENT

Many citizens today distrust government. It seems alien, remote and not responsive to their legitimate needs. I felt this way four years ago and ran for the legislature to do something about it. I have continually pressed for a ceiling on state spending, for transferring powers from Juneau to regional offices and municipalities (nearer to the people) and for keeping citizens informed. Observers consider me probably the hardest-working legislator in Juneau.

I introduced a public information and privacy bill to open up government and protect individual rights, one to improve the treatment of the mentally ill and a third to spread the tax burden more equitably. The agendas for the Health, Education and Social Services Committee, which I chaired, were always sent to Anchorage, Fairbanks and Ketchikan so that citizens might write or call about bills being considered. I intend to continue this course.

No one owns me. No one doubts that I vote my conscience. The answer to distrust of government is to elect people you do trust. I think I have earned your trust and, if elected, will continue to deserve it.

STATEMENT

FREEDOM IS THE ISSUE

We no longer have a two-party system. We have one political philosophy masquerading under two labels — the people have no choice. Republicans and Democrats have been offering the same solution for years — more regulations, taxes, and bureaucracy and less freedom. As a Libertarian, I will provide a choice of less government and more freedom.

The Libertarian philosophy takes the best aspects of both the liberal and conservative doctrines and molds them together, carefully accentuating individual responsibility and eliminating any reference to socialism. Many traditional liberals and conservatives realize that they have come full circle — “that they are both fighting oppressive government” and that they must join ranks and fight for each other’s freedoms.

I am convinced that Alaskans want their freedom more than a handout. They want their freedom to hunt, fish, trap; to work and keep the fruits of that labor; to own and work the land whether it be mining, farming, logging or recreation. They want the independence to live and work and raise their children in peace and without fear from man or government. If elected, I will work diligently for less government, less taxes and more personal freedom for you!

STATEMENT

Alaska's state government strongly affects the lives of Fairbanks area residents by making decisions concerning our economy, our environment, our educational system and many of our individual activities. Our state constitution says that government "is instituted solely for the good of the people as a whole". I believe that means all legislation must be scrutinized for its effect on all Alaskans and cannot serve a narrow range of interests only. We must insure that government serves the public interest, yet does not become overly burdensome through unreasonable laws, regulations or administrative procedures.

Alaska has grown increasingly dependent upon government and Outside interests in recent years. I believe most Alaskans prefer to be more self-sufficient. State policies can further this goal through loans and tax incentives for renewable resource development and small businesses, through carefully planned in-state sales of state resources and by making sufficient land available for individual, farming and commercial needs, as well as public uses. We can provide opportunities for all present and future residents to enjoy and participate in the wealth of our land.

Our future can be enhanced by effective representation in Juneau. I'd appreciate the privilege of serving you in the State House.

STATEMENT

State government and the state budget are growing faster than is healthy for the State. Part of the blame can be placed on the administration, but much can be placed on the legislature. We need responsible growth and control.

Legislators must return to the duty of providing a check and balance on government. Instead of creating a new program when an old one isn't working, we must conduct a program review through the committee system which will improve the old and incorporate the new without creating another agency which expands the system.

As the State has grown, we have experienced a breakdown in government efficiency. Enforcement of our existing laws has broken down through expanded markets to police, i.e., unemployment insurance abuses, building trade licensing abuses.

Rather than writing new laws and expanding the bureaucracy to further restrict the honest, we need to expand our investigators to deal with the abuses. Three unemployment investigators statewide cannot possibly keep fraud in check.

The legislature should act as a catalyst in stabilizing the state's economy — not do the whole show. The legislature should set the guidelines for healthy development with protections to our lifestyle and environment. We must do the rest.

STATEMENT

As a Libertarian candidate for the Alaska State House of Representatives, I stand on a basic philosophy of individual and economic freedom, lower taxes and less government.

I support the Beirne Initiative and will work for any other reasonable measure that would convey land to private ownership as quickly as possible. I will pursue all avenues available to drastically reduce all types of personal taxes. I will vigorously support any measure that will reaffirm our sovereign rights as a state and reduce federal government intervention.

For many years I have been voting for Democrats and Republicans that have made statements during the campaigns that indicated that change was on the horizon. Unfortunately, each session of the legislature produces more regulations, higher taxes, less and less importance placed on individual and economic freedoms. Regardless of party, the end result has been the same — we get further restriction and control of our Alaskan lifestyles.

It is time to put a halt to pork-barrel legislation, vote swapping, needless laws and regulations, irresponsible fiscal management and long, wasteful sessions.

I pledge to you that all of my actions as a legislator will revolve around that philosophy and be dedicated to that end.

STATEMENT

I am convinced that Alaska has a vital bearing upon the economy of the United States. These interests should be foremost in people's minds; however, we should also protect our environment — not only the physical, but the economic and working environment. Alaska has been foremost in personal freedom — the will to work and success in life, both personally and economically. To insure this, our legislature should zealously protect our personal liberty by limiting governmental growth and expenditures and simplifying government for all Alaskans.

What has interested me most in running for the legislature is the concern that Fairbanks area residents have shown against the all too rapid growth of government, both in expenditures and administrative inefficiency, as well as the many infringements upon each individual's natural rights. Let's put back the incentive into individual rights and "its" responsibilities, with the people getting more done by themselves at a much lesser cost than government can provide. I know that when I serve in the House I can protect those few individual rights Alaskans have always known and possibly regain those rights due us by the Constitution that have slowly been taken away by legislative and regulatory bodies of the state government.

I have lived in Alaska for eighteen years and am married to the former Laura Sockpick of Shishmaref. I have always been an active subsistence hunter and fisherman and am very concerned with the direction subsistence matters are taking. They seem to have been strangled by the big money interests and the trophy hunters' lobby and the lack of interest by a non-local fish and game board. I feel that there are ways to strengthen subsistence priorities without slighting other concerns.

I was on the Nome City Council from 1972-1975 and worked hard to get sensible budget priorities. I am just as concerned with the past irresponsibilities in the state budget and money spending policies. I believe taxes can be lowered without cutting services through sound management and by eliminating waste and duplication.

I am active in veteran affairs and am Commander of American Legion Post 19. When I was Western District Commander, I worked closely with State Senator Willie Hensley on a bill to increase low-cost loans to veterans. I am also friends with many of the other senators and representatives so I feel I will be able to get their support for the Nome area.
