OTHER:

I’m a third-generation Alaskan whose family came here in 1940 to serve; my father helped build the Trans-Alaska Pipeline. More than 33 years ago, my husband and I returned from college to raise our four children in Alaska.
As a small business owner, community volunteer, and longtime public education policy advocate, I’ve worked inside and outside government to bring people together, solve problems, and strengthen our communities. Whether managing a large hotel or helping teens prepare soup for hundreds, I roll up my sleeves and get things done. I’ll bring that same commitment to the Legislature.

STATEMENT:

I’m running with a clear vision: an Alaska that is strong, safe, and smart — a place where our children want to stay, build lives, and raise families of their own. With new leadership at the top, by working together, Alaska’s best days are ahead.

Public safety must come first. Every Alaska community deserves reliable emergency response, affordable housing, and safe neighborhoods. Protecting women and children from sexual assault and domestic violence ensures safety, dignity, justice, healing, and stronger communities.
Recruiting and retaining first responders, teachers, and public servants is a priority. With hundreds of vacancies across the state, we need competitive pay and retirement benefits that attract excellent workers and keep them here.
Every child deserves a first-rate education. We must support our schools, reduce overcrowded classrooms, and bring high-quality teachers to every community.

Alaskans also deserve full access to affordable, high-quality healthcare, especially women. And as our elder population grows, seniors must be able to find affordable care here at home.

To grow our economy, we need reliable, low-cost energy.
The Railbelt needs a long-term plan for stable, affordable power. Responsible resource development will remain central to Alaska’s future, even as the world moves toward cleaner energy.

And we must finally put Alaska on a sustainable fiscal path with a balanced budget that protects essential services and supports long-term growth.

I will bring an open heart, an open mind, courage, and Alaska values — community, cooperation, and common sense — to the Legislature to get things done.
