STATEMENT:
My compass is set by common sense and a clear understanding of right and wrong. I believe a return to common-sense bipartisan leadership can bring Alaska back to the top in education, employment, and opportunities for working families.

We must fully fund education and give our schools the stability they need to prepare the next generation of Alaskans. Every child deserves access to a quality education, strong teachers, and the opportunities that come from a successful school system. Investing in our students is an investment in Alaska’s future workforce and economy.

My family is an oil family. I live everyday grateful for the opportunities provided, my family as a result of the oil industry. I know responsible oil development remains essential to our economy. I also know, it is wrong when profits of Outside corporations come before the people who live and work here. Oil companies should pay their fair share so that the wealth generated from our resources strengthens our communities and secures our future. Alaska’s natural resources belong to all Alaskans.

I understand the challenges facing our communities—from the rising cost of living to concerns about public safety and economic stability. I will bring practical solutions, accountability, and a clear fresh voice to Juneau.

The choices we make today will shape Alaska for generations to come. Together, we can restore common sense to the government, strengthen our schools and economy, and build an Alaska where families, workers, and businesses can thrive.
