STATEMENT:
As a lifelong Alaskan, a fisherman, and a military mom, I'm running for U.S. Senate because I've seen firsthand how DC is failing us.

Growing up, Alaska was a place of abundance. Now, we have scarcity. From Juneau to Utqiagvik, our state is struggling — prices are rising, fish runs are declining, schools are closing, roads and infrastructure are crumbling — and no one in DC is doing anything about it. I'm running to change that.

I'm in this fight to fix the rigged system in DC, lower gas, grocery, healthcare, and housing costs for hardworking Alaskans, restore our fisheries, and put Alaska first.

My only agenda in the Senate will be serving Alaskans. That means fighting for fish, family, and freedom.

Fish: restore our fisheries, ban factory trawling, and reduce bycatch.

Family: I'm fighting for an Alaska where young people can afford to stay and build a life. I will cut taxes, lower costs, and raise wages for hardworking families. I'll push to lower housing, childcare, and energy costs, reverse harmful healthcare cuts, and fight to fund programs and infrastructure Alaskans depend on like the Marine Highway System, the Railbelt energy grid, public radio, and education.

Freedom: I will always protect Alaskans' individual freedoms, including the right to privacy and the right to bear arms.

I will be an independent voice for Alaska — listening to Alaskans, not DC insiders. Together, we can restore abundance and deliver real relief for hardworking Alaskans.
