Other (Biographical Information):

My Alaskan roots run deep—both sets of my grandparents moved to Alaska after World War II seeking new opportunities, giving me a lasting appreciation and love for Alaska.

After earning my degree and teaching credential I returned to Anchorage to begin my teaching career, serving as a public-school educator for almost three decades.

My husband, Matt, and I have been married for twenty-eight years and are proud parents of four children: two serving in the military and two who have chosen to remain in Alaska.

Position Statement

As a teacher, church member, and community volunteer, I value strong families, personal responsibility, and individual freedom. I look forward to bringing this experience to Juneau to represent District 21.

I will focus on practical solutions that strengthen our economy, improve educational opportunities, support public safety, and ensure government lives within its means. Alaska has tremendous opportunities, but we must make wise decisions that protect the Permanent Fund, encourage responsible resource development, support small businesses, and create an environment where families can afford to live, work, and retire here.

I believe elected officials should be accessible and accountable. Throughout this campaign, I have spent countless hours walking neighborhoods, knocking on doors, and meeting voters where they are. Those conversations have reinforced my belief that people want honest leadership, respectful dialogue, and representatives who are willing to show up, listen, and follow through.
