Former Attorney General Treg Taylor is running for governor. Raised by a single mother, he learned hard work matters. Treg attended the Air Force Academy, graduated from BYU with degrees in political science and law, and worked nights to put himself through school.

Treg built a career as an attorney and is the third longest-serving Alaska Attorney General in state history. He led criminal prosecutions, defended the Second Amendment, protected parents' rights, fought against Biden overreach, and worked to unleash Alaska's energy and mining resources. Treg and Jodi are business owners and parents of six children.

Position Statement

For Treg Taylor, this race is about taking back Alaska's way of life and protecting our values.

Alaskans live here for a reason. Here, we work hard, raise our families, build our lives, and live our own way. But woke radicals, Lower 48 liberals, and D.C. bureaucrats are already trying to change Alaska.

You do not have to guess where Treg stands. As Attorney General, he built a proven record on the issues Alaskans care about. As a prosecutor, Treg helped drive crime to a 40-year low and cut sexual assaults by 25 percent. He helped pass a law increasing the penalty to second-degree murder for drug dealers when the poison they peddle kills. He took on the radical left, held the line against D.C. bureaucratic overreach, defended the Second Amendment, protected parents' rights, and fought to unleash Alaska's energy and mining resources.

As Governor, Treg will protect girls' sports, stop woke indoctrination in schools, and defend Alaskans' constitutional rights. He will take on Juneau to cut waste, balance the budget, protect the PFD, make Alaska affordable again, and partner with President Trump to grow our economy so our kids can stay, work, and build their lives here. He will stand up for Alaska fishermen and families by stopping trawling that damages our environment. Alaska's fish and game should belong to Alaskans first.

Treg is a proven leader who gets results. Help him take back our way of life and build Alaska.
